

Background

An ethical will, also known as a legacy letter, is an opportunity to preserve meaningful parts of your life and legacy. Ethical wills are generally written for the benefit of loved ones and can be directed to children, extended family, friends, or other groups/communities. They are a way of expressing and transmitting one's history, principles, values, and wishes beyond those in a legal will or trust. Ethical wills can be shared with loved ones during life or after one's passing.

The ethical will is a tradition with Jewish roots. The Torah, Talmud, and medieval and modern Jewish literature all contain examples of ethical wills. However, there is no standard structure for an ethical will, so you may personalize it to fit your needs.

This workbook is organized into five sections: Family History, Personal History, Spirituality, Philanthropy, and Wishes & Intentions. Each section contains six areas of inquiry for you to explore, for a total of thirty prompts. At the end of this workbook, you will find a list of further resources that you may find helpful.

It is a good idea to think about your intended audience before beginning the process of creating your ethical will; this will help you determine how much context or detail would be helpful to include.

You do not need to answer every question in this workbook; feel free to skip whatever you feel does not apply to you. If a particular question moves you to write about a different subject altogether, go for it! You can be as brief or elaborate as you like. However, consider enhancing your responses by providing context, detail, and stories, as it will be more meaningful for you and your intended recipients.

It is normal to feel overwhelmed or emotional when working on your ethical will. It is okay to take breaks. It can be an ongoing process and does not need to be completed in one sitting. Don't worry about writing a perfect first draft — just start writing and know that you can continue and revise later. The Jewish Community Foundation team is always here to answer any questions. We hope that the process of creating your ethical will is as meaningful for you as the end product will surely be for your loved ones.

Document Instructions

Please write your answers in the blank spaces provided below each question. Should you need more room to elaborate or expand upon your answers, we've provided extra pages at the end of this workbook.
